HOW TO APPEAL IN THE e-RA BIDDING PROCESS

What is an appeal?

The appeal is a mechanism to challenge administrative decisions after the results are displayed to the bidders, which is the Selection for the Winning Bid Phase in the e-RA system. The appeal is a tool to protect the rights of the bidder.

When to appeal?

As soon as the winner is declared, there must be an immediate and motivated manifestation of the intention to appeal. The e-RA system gives 30 minutes after the winner is declared for those with the intention to appeal, so they can indicate it in a system own field. If this does not occur, the right to appeal is lost. Hence the importance of always being attentive to all stages of the bidding process. After expressing the interest in filing an appeal, the appellant has only 3 calendar days to present the relevant reasons and arguments for that.

Who can appeal?

Appeal legitimacy is attributed to the one who participates in the bidding process, as a rule, the bidder. The legitimacy is kept as long as the bidder declares its intention to appeal immediately after the the winner is declared. The e-RA system gives 30 minutes for that

How is the appeal judged?

The administrative appeal is directed against the decision of a auctioneer (contracting agent) or the bidding commission. What is sought is the reconsideration of the administrative act that caused the conflict. However, when there is no reconsideration, the appeal is forwarded to the competent authority, the person responsible in the military organization that gave the authorization for the bidding process to be published. This must be the impartial figure who will ultimately judge the appeal.

How does it work in the e-RA system?

The e-RA system helps you managing the correct timing to do that. The intention to appeal is just a manner to indicate that you do not agree with the Contracting Agent decision and that you want to send a formal appeal against. If you do indicate your intention to appeal before the deadline given by the eRA system, you will have more 3 calendar days to effectively issue an appeal, with the arguments and supporting documents you may need to prove why the decision is not following the terms and conditions that govern the whole purchase process.

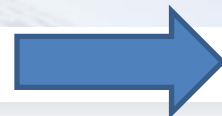

The following presentation will show you how it is done using the e-RA system tools.
